Commissioned by Financial Services and the Treasury Bureau (FSTB), the second round of Cyberport's Financial Practitioners FinTech Training Programme (Training Programme) Webinars Series ran from May to September this year, and has now successfully concluded. This round of the Training Programme saw a much more enthusiastic response, with over 2,600 financial practitioners taking part, more than doubling the last round. The number of participating financial institutions has also nearly doubled, from 49 to 91, reflecting the Training Programme's growing recognition and support within the financial industry.

A graduation ceremony was held on 3 November 2022. The ceremony was officiated by Mr Christopher Hui, Secretary for Financial Services and the Treasury, and Mr Simon Chan, Chairman of Cyberport, together with Mr Peter Yan, CEO of Cyberport and Mr Eric Chan, Chief Public Mission Officer of Cyberport.

Mr Christopher Hui, Secretary for Financial Services and the Treasury, says he is pleased to note the enthusiastic response of the trade towards this year's Financial Practitioners FinTech Training Programme. He hoped that the Training Programme could help expand Hong Kong's FinTech talent pool, thereby facilitating the financial services sectors to grasp the opportunities brought by digitisation. He also thanked Cyberport for implementing the Training Programme smoothly.

Mr Simon Chan, Chairman of Cyberport, is encouraged by the fact that FinTech applications created by 8 of Cyberport's start-ups have been adopted by 10 participating banks and financial institutions, and believes the increased application of FinTech solutions will promote innovation and enhance competitiveness within the financial services sector.

In order to appraise recognise financial institutions have shown commitment to fostering digital transformation and talent development, as well as the outstanding performance of the FinTech talents in the Programme, Cyberport set up three awards:
